

BIRTH INJURIES

Most babies are born without incident and grow up to be healthy children and adults. Unfortunately, a significant percentage of child births do not go well and those infants often sustain serious and permanent brain damage and other injuries. While not all birth injuries are due to medical malpractice, a lawyer that is experienced in handling birth injury cases knows how to establish a case if medical treatment during the delivery was inappropriate and the infant was injured due to substandard care.

Mr. Egan is an experienced birth injury attorney. He has successfully prosecuted many birth injury cases and secured substantial awards for the injured children and their parents who have been represented by him. Some of these cases have been the subject of news stories that have been aired and/or published by the media.

When a child has suffered serious injuries at the time of his or her birth, the child's future is in jeopardy. The child and his parents need the help of an experienced attorney who can help them provide financial security for their child's future. All of the child's medical records which set forth the details surrounding the child's birth and resulting injuries must be secured and carefully reviewed. Expert obstetricians, and pediatric neurologists, and neuroradiologists need to analyze the pertinent evidence in order to assess whether or not the case has merit. This comprehensive and necessary process frequently consumes several months.

When you retain Mr. Egan to represent you and your family, you can be assured that you have the most experienced and knowledgeable legal help that you can receive. Mr. Egan has reviewed many birth injury cases and has advised parents and other victims of professional negligence on areas ranging from the failure to properly recognize and react to fetal distress, the failure to perform cesarean sections, injuries due to forceps, anoxia or asphyxiation, improper assessments of fetal age or gestation, and many other types of child birth injuries.
